

Melissa is a former Epic Application Executive with analyst, management, and director-level experience. During her seven years at Epic, she worked with executives at healthcare organizations to help maximize the investment they were making in their EMR. Melissa also spent some time at University of Wisconsin-Madison as an operations director with a background in technical infrastructure and development solutions. The variety of experiences she's had lends itself to a strategic, holistic view of how to best address challenges with operationalizing technology in healthcare effectively.